Incredulity is dead. The trolley car, the incandescent light, the telegraph, telephone. X-ray, motion picture and submarine boat have battered all the life out of popular unbelief. Today we believe rothing is impossible.

Tesla talks about airships guided from the earth by wireless, fitting up the ocean with electric lights, every family making its own ice, about irrigating the earth with sea water, annihilating fogs at will, making a machine write by talking to it and taking photographs of human thought by wireless.

The Oaths of Yesteryear.

Burges Johnson, in the Century. Most of our own commonplace exclamations might be traced back to an earlier day when the vigor of their youth was still within them. Imagine two old Romans standing upon the deck of a ship gazing upon the eruption of Vesuvius. They watch in awestruck silence, until one of them gasps. "I swear by Father Jove that never before have I beheld such wonders!" And the other echoes, "Oh, Gemini, heavenly twins, gaze down into my heart, for I have no words to paint the glory of this spectacle!" Centuries later the inheritors of some of their classic speech gaze upon Vesuvius, and one says, "Jove! what a sight!" and the other echoes, "Jiminy, ain't it grand!"

Gone are the echoing oaths of a day when swearing was an art. Those swash-buckling phrases went with swash-buckling deeds. "By the bones of Saint Michae!! I will split thee to thy cringing gizzard!" There was a mouth-filling and classic threat for you! In these days, when automatic revolvers have replaced fencing swords, there isn't time to say it. Gone are the cloud-splitting denunciations of militant churchmen, and if we fling out what is left of the sounding phrases of some theological curse, it is as a boy might take from his pocket a stingless hornet for the effect that it produces in the schoolroom, until in time both hornet and effect become worn out.

Gone are all the fine old oaths; but why are they gone? Their parts may all be found in the dictionary. Might not you and I put them together again? Only as we might reconstruct the mammoth; he will stand here bravely in his cold bones, but he will not trumpet for us. two old Romans standing upon the deck of a ship gazing upon the erup-

COTTON MARKETS.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 5 to 7 points and sold about 6 to 10 points net lower right after the call in response to relatively weak cables, a favorable weather map and a renewal of July liquidation. The decline carried July down to 12.66, or into new low ground for the movement, but there was enough covering or scattered investment buying to check the new crop months around 12.77 for October and 12.94 for December.

NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, May 27.—Continued good weather over the belt and poor cables gave the cotton market a heavy feeling in the early trading today. A ness prices were 3 to 6 points under yesterday's close.
Futures opened steady. Opening bid: July, 12.60; October, 12.61; December, 12.71; January, 12.82; March, 12.97.

Gilt-edged securities and copper shares were dull, but shipping shares continued strong and active, while Japanese bonds and mining stocks were steadily maintained and City Service held its recent spectacular rise.

Business in American securities was limited and the market closed dull but steady. Money and discount rates were easy.
